

ABSTRACT OF THE DISCLOSURE

Toilet Paper Storage and Dispenser Container

A toilet paper storage and dispenser container in which to store and manually dispense rolls of toilet paper. The container comprises a convex container front in the form of a slideable face plate and a removable lid, an access door in which to extract a roll and a finger access slot in which a finger is inserted to remove a spare roll of toilet paper, a viewing aperture to visually see the number of spare rolls available. The holding container fits snugly into a bathroom corner crevice where two walls meet or could come in a form that can be mounted flush on a wall. The container comprises a strap and track mechanism that holds upper rolls in the container from falling down while the door is opened.
